

Translating bioinformatics for patient care in hospitalsChandra Verma

Atomistic Simulations and Design in Biology, Biomolecular modelling and Design
Function, Bioinformatics Institute, A* STAR, Singapore-138671
E-mail: Chandra@bii.a-star.edu.org

Abstract

Increasing access to sequencing technologies is making it possible to probe the drivers of diseases in patients in hospital settings. This information can be mined using tools of computational biology, modelling, machine learning to guide the doctors into prescribing treatments that are tailored for the patients. The role of modelling in some test cases will be discussed.